300/WAR artist Bailey Bryan and Dot Records artist Drake White have been named to The Recording Academy's "Artist Of Tomorrow" program leading into "The 59th Annual GRAMMY Awards" on CBS-TV. CBS's program celebrates the next generation of musicians by giving fans the chance to check out videos from three up-and-coming acts selected by veteran GRAMMY artists.

Lady Antebellum's Hillary Scott nominated Bryan, who commented, "I woke up this morning in Tampa, FL, loving life on my very first radio tour, and now the GRAMMYS know my name?" She added, "But seriously, I think music is such a powerful medium for connecting us as human beings. I hope my songs help other people feel more understood. We are all so unique and different, and that's what also makes us the same." White was nominated by Zac Brown Band, with Brown saying, "I love Drake's whole record. I think he really writes from a real place. I love his voice. I love his passion. He gets down -- he gets moved...it reminds me a lot of when we were getting going."
