

People

JUNE 14, 2010

Music by Chuck Arnold

COUNTRY

You know Dierks Bentley is serious about going bluegrass when he enlists the queen of the genre, Alison Krauss, to sing harmony on the title-track opener and then ropes her in again for the gracefully sketched ballad "Draw Me a Map." But Krauss is not the only one lending real authenticity to this acoustic, rootsy love-in. The McCoury family is represented by Ronnie on mandola and mandolin, Rob on banjo and their father, Del, singing on a cover of U2's "Pride (In the Name of Love)" that also features the Punch Brothers. Meanwhile Vince Gill sits in on the plucky "Fiddlin' Around."