This week, we've got lots of tunes for you to get your weekend started. Dierks Bentley explores the ins and outs of love on his new record, Black, while Band of Skulls go back to their roots on By Default. Fifth Harmony will have their Harmonizers going wild over their new record, 7/27. Catfish and the Bottlemen continue their Brit rock momentum, while Broncho are back with a refreshed new album.

Whether you're ready to hit the beach or just going to keep it casual at home, here are the top 5 album releases of the week.

Country music has been known for the stories it tells and matters of the heart. And although Dierks Bentley has seven albums in his arsenal, his latest release, Black, takes a hard look at the ins and outs of a relationship. From the euphoric high points to the ridiculous fuck ups, Dierks takes us on this journey. And when you listen to the title track, which opens the record, and close your eyes, you're immediately catapulted into this character's shoes. You then go through the motions with him from the time the love died, the grievance period and finally see how the experience has changed him with "Can't Be Replaced." Maren Morris, Natalie Hemby, Jessie Alexander and "Ex's and Ohs" singer Elle King all contribute vocals to the album, which gives this Dierks record a different twist.

While the message behind "Different for Girls," which features Elle, might be up for debate (i.e. Are girls as emotional as these artists portray?), the tune itself is lovely as is the rest of this record. If you're a fan of Dierks or just country music in general, this is clearly a great addition to your music library.
