Who's the last person Thomas Rhett sees before he goes to bed at night?

Surprisingly, the answer used to be Brad Pitt.

If you climbed on board the "Die a Happy Man" singer's tour bus last year, you would have found Pitt's image hanging above his bunk bed.

Let him explain.

"My buddy Cameron, who is on the road with me, put a picture of Brad Pitt above my pillow because he's my manspiration, which is super embarrassing," Thomas Rhett, 25, tells PEOPLE.

"I was trying to get ripped like him in Fight Club, which has not happened yet," he explains. "I don't have it anymore. I had to take it down. There was just too much embarrassment over it!"

Rhett's sophomore album, Tangled Up, is out Friday.
