Thomas Rhett Akins and his high school sweetheart, wife Lauren Akins, are quite possibly the cutest couple in country music. Remember his bid for ACM new artist of the year when he made a video of their love story? Or their romantic, PDA-filled video for "Die a Happy Man"? Or — oh yeah — when he won Single of the Year at Wednesday night’s CMAs, planted a sweet smooch on her and declared from the stage, “My lovely wife, she was the full inspiration for the song?” We could go on.

But in addition to being ridiculously adorable together, they’re also incredibly stylish. We’ve noticed their red carpet chemistry has been stronger than ever lately — just check out their style at tonight’s CMA Awards (where he already picked up single of the year) — as well as their best moments to date.

On Tuesday night the duo warmed up for the CMAs with a stop at the BMI Country Awards, where Thomas wore a silver vest with matching pants paired with a black shirt and bow tie, while Lauren went with a sexy fire engine red gown with deep-V neckline.

And Thomas totally approved, writing on Instagram, “Woo baby that red dress!!!!!!”
